MUST SUFFER FOR HER PERJURY

Mrs. Osborne Sentenced to Nine Months'

Imprisonment for Her Crime.

LONDON, March 9 .- Mrs. Florence Ethel Osborne was sentenced this morning in the central criminal court to nine months' imprisonment at hard labor for perjury and larceny in connection with the theft of jewels from her

Greatest efforts have been made to save her from imprisonment, especially in view of the fact that she is about to become a mother. In fact that she is about to become a mother. In court today her counsel, Sir Charles Russell, made a plea on her behalf. Sir Charles trusted that the court in pronouncing sentence would consider the prisoner's condition and the anguish of mind to which she was subjected.

At this point Mrs. Hargraves, who was present and who seemed greatly affected, asked the court if she might speak. The judge revisels "Conly upon an appeal for mercy."

Mrs. Hargraves, who was now in tears, cried out: "I do appeal for mercy with all my heart. I have known and loved Ethel (Mrs. Osborne) life and am convinced that she is not in

I have known and loved Ethel (Mrs. Osborne) all my life and am convinced that she is not in her right mind."

Mrs. Hargraves here broke down and could not continue her appeal. The scene was very affecting, all the principals in the sad affair being in tears and most of the ladies in the court room also weeping and uttering sobs. The ludge maintained his stoictism and proceeded to deliver senvence. Turning toward the prisoner he said: "Florence Osborne you have pleaded guilty to larceny and perjury. You stole your friend's jewels when staying at her house and converted the proceeds of the theft to your own use. When the finger of suspicion pointed to you, the thief, you commenced an action to vindicate your character and falsely and corruptly swore in the hope of convincing the jury that you were not a thief. You sat daily instructing your eminent counsel with suggestions that your friends were thieves. It is impossible to forecast what the result of that action would have been but for the appearance of an unexpected witness. Possibly an indelible stain of ignominy would have been fixed upon the character of Mrs. Hargraves. I am aware of your condition. I also take into consideration the facts that the stolen jewelry has been returned to the owner and the costs of the law suits refunded to her. Also that you have already served some time in prison. You are liable to law suits refunded to her. Also that you have surrendered to justice and that you have already served some time in prison. You are liable to seven years' imprisonment for your orime, but considering your condition and the position in which you are placed, or have placed yourself, the sentence of the court is that you be imprisoned for nine months, with such labor as your health permits."

As she heard the sentence pronounced the prisoner solved aloud. She was astoniched

As she heard the sentence pronounced the prisoner sobbed aloud. She was astonished and overcome by the words of the judge, and a moment later she fainted and fell from her chair. She was carried to the warden's cell. Mrs. Hargraves seemed almost as much overcome as her unfortunate friend. Major Hargraves and Capt. Osborne both turned pale with emotion. The crowd quickly dispersed with very little noise. Everybody seemed cast down by the sad scenes that had been witnessed.

well enough to be familiar with the cushions and the Euglish, the important thing to cultivate is his stroke. It is the hardest thing about billiard playing to get a good stroke, and sometimes the greatest players 'fall down' because they lose control of it. Now, the stroke wholly depends on the action of the wrist. 'Jake' Shaefer or any good player will make a shot of seven cushions with less apparent force than a beginner will exert in getting three. This is due to the superior wrist movement. It's the same way with violin playing. The quality and touch all depend on wrist manipulation. So with curving a base ball. Great pitchers always work a strong wrist movement on the ball as it leaves the hand. If they didn't it wouldn't curve at all.'
